

Dissemination of Survey Findings on Emerging Barriers to Girls' Education

Due to the lockdown that occurred as a result of the COVID-19 outbreak, many girls dropped out of school, and some got married off because most of their parents could not afford to keep them in school. The current insecurity challenges in the country is also a stumbling block to girls' education.

We really appreciate the PERL program for deepening our understanding of these emerging barriers and more importantly, how we can deploy the safe space recommendations and principles in schools and the community.

We had a lot to learn from the dissemination event, especially how to protect our Girls in schools. Even though this is something we already know because we have put some measures in place, we have added to our reservoir of knowledge, thanks to PERL.

From the survey findings, we will improve on what we have been doing in the past. Normally, we have prefects of notable character that have been mandated to go with students after closing hours. We have some of our party members put their eyes on the environment, so they can alert the school authorities about any suspicious movement.
